

Natural Bushland Scattering

NICHE WALL

Our beautiful Niche Wall, which runs below the lawn graves section, features local stone in the distinctive 'crazy paving style'. These positions are single interments, but neighbouring positions can be acquired in advance for spouses or family.

NATURAL BUSHLAND

SCATTERING

The scattering of cremated remains in cemetery's natural bushland area is a popular form of remembrance. The scattering area looks over the cemetery and is located next to the tranquil surrounds of the pond and waterfall. The memorial includes a name plate on a commemorative boulder.

ANDERSONS CREEK CEMETERY

A BUSHLAND CEMETERY

Andersons Creek Cemetery first opened in 1858 and is one of Victoria's oldest cemeteries. Originally a monumental cemetery, in recent years it has been expanded with an expansive lawn and bushland theme.

The first burial recorded in the cemetery was that of Patrick Halfpenny, aged three years, on 29 October, 1856. Many records were lost in the 1939 Black Friday bushfires, but a monument at the front gate now commemorates those buried in unmarked graves whose paperwork was never able to be recovered. An analysis of the occupations of those buried in unmarked graves has revealed a high proportion of gold miners — Andersons Creek is where gold was first discovered in Victoria, in 1851.

The front gates and their piers were a donation in 1976 from Bill McCulloch, who gave more than three decades of service as a grave digger, secretary and Trust member. One of the piers also serves as a monument to, and final resting place for, Bill's ashes, which were interred in 1987.

MEMORIAL OPTIONS

ROSE GARDEN

Roses, symbol of immortal love, devotion, peace and tranquillity are a beautiful way to remember your loved ones. One of the most popular areas, the Memorial Rose Garden has standard roses in many colours including whites, pinks, purples, yellows, and oranges. The garden is located between the monumental and lawn graves and is available as companion positions (two interments).

BENCE ROCK MEMORIALS

Bence Rock & Grant Rock Memorial positions offer between two and four interments, depending on the rock chosen. The use of local rock and natural bushland setting capture the unique native character of the region.

GARDEN PATHWAY MEMORIALS

The Garden Pathway winds from the rose garden up to the native gardens in the upper part of the cemetery before winding back down toward the Bence Rock section. Companion memorial positions are available along the pathway.
